Biography

Dr. Amy Fuller specializes in the integration of early behavioral treatment and targeted social communication intervention for young children with autism. She received her Ph.D. in Human Development and Psychology from UCLA under Dr. Connie Kasari. While at UCLA, Dr. Fuller developed a particular interest in the use of naturalistic developmental behavioral interventions to increase early joint attention and play development in young children. Dr. Fuller is currently the executive clinical director at Village Learning and is committed to expanding access to evidence based treatment and bridging the gap between short term university based treatments and ABA intervention received in the community.
